Learning outcomes

On successful completion of the course the student will be able to:

Knowledge and understanding

- identify and distinguish economic and business structures, actors (i.e. the State, businesses, non-governmental organisations) and processes that influence the realization of human rights in a globalizing world.

Competence and skills

- investigate and analyse complex phenomena, issues and situations through theoretical and conceptual approaches;
- independently collect, summarize and critically review academic texts;
- critically assess and give constructive feedback on peer papers;
- apply business and human rights standards to specific cases/examples;
- assess the impact on human rights of economic policies and business practices;

Judgement and approach

- critically reflect upon the role and responsibilities of states and the emerging accountability of non-state actors (i.e. market actors) in relation to human rights;
- identify and discuss emerging topics in human rights in relation to market economy.

Course content

The course explores the tension of obligations and responsibilities of states and the emerging accountability discussions on market actors. It explores various contentious issues that have a bearing on the intersection of politics, economics and market economy, and human rights.

The module encourages critical thinking about challenges spurred by this intersection and ways in which such challenges can be met by different actors, so as to improve the realization of human rights in a globalizing world. The course is organized in blocks clustering different themes, situations and/or case studies, such as: the responsibility for human rights by different actors; the understanding and application of business and human rights standards; and the assessment of how business and human rights standards are applied in practice by different actors, including the role of civil society in monitoring and developing human rights standards in the context of business and human rights. Against this background, the course engages with different areas, such as child labour, gender and work, environmental impacts, degradations and environmental refugees, migrant workers, indigenous peoples' land and cultural rights, farmers movements, transport, tourism, worker's rights, etc.

Form of teaching

Language of instruction: English

Assessment

The course examinations are carried out through five assignments, as follows:

- Assignment 1 is a group exercise in the form of a literature review of pre-selected academic papers (2 credits)
- Assignment 2 is an individually written literature review of self-chosen academic papers (2 credits)
- Assignment 3 is a group peer review exercise of papers written in the course (1 credit)
- Assignment 4 is an individually written revised and expanded paper, based on feedback received by peers and on one's reflections and further research (literature review)(5 credits).
- Assignment 5 is a case study on a selected current issue (5 credits).

The examination assignments may include written and oral peer review feedback, and seminars for discussion and presentation. In the case of missed or failed seminar participation, supplementary assignment is provided.

A student who has taken two exams in a course or part of a course without obtaining a pass grade is entitled to the nomination of another examiner. The student needs to contact the department for a new examiner, preferably in writing, and this should be approved by the department unless there are special reasons to the contrary (Chapter 6 Section 22 of the Higher Education Ordinance).

If a student has received a recommendation from the University of Gothenburg for special educational support, where it is compatible with the learning outcomes of the course and provided that no unreasonable resources are required, the examiner may decide to allow the student to sit an adjusted exam or alternative form of assessment.

In the event that a course has ceased or undergone major changes, students are to be guaranteed at least three examination sessions (including the ordinary examination session) over a period of at least one year, but no more than two years, after the course has ceased/been changed. The same applies to placements and professional placements (VFU), although this is restricted to just one additional examination session.

Grades

The grading scale comprises: Excellent (A), Very good (B), Good (C), Satisfactory (D), Sufficient (E) and Fail (F).

In order to obtain a passed grade on the whole course, students need to receive at least the grade E on all of the required assignments.

Course evaluation

The course coordinator is responsible for systematically and regularly collecting the students' views of the course, and for making sure that the results of the evaluations in different forms are taken into consideration when developing the course. The results and possible changes to the course will be shared with the students who participated in the evaluation and the next class to take the course.

Additional information

Study trips and other similar events can be organised that may include costs for the students, e.g., travels, lodging, etc. When this is the case, participation is voluntary.
