Learning outcomes

After completion of the course the student is expected to:

Knowledge and understanding

- present in-depth knowledge and analytical insights on contemporary perspectives and theoretical concepts related to globalization, poverty, and social work practice.
- demonstrate knowledge and understanding about actors, policies, structures, and mechanisms related to globalization and issues of global poverty.
- define, discuss and problematize ideas in social work in local, national, and international settings and present insights how this relates to globalization and poverty.
- present and use knowledge and gain an understanding about contemporary topics related to human rights, migration, health, environmental sustainability, digitalization, financialization, power asymmetries, and account for their implications for social work strategies.

Competence and skills

- be able to independently synthesize knowledge and discuss, and problematize globalization from different perspectives, especially in terms of class, gender, and ethnicity.
- produce and communicate knowledge about globalization, poverty, and global social policy.
- plan and critically reflect upon social work interventions in the context of globalization and poverty.

Judgement and approach

- reflect and evaluate human rights and ethical standpoints in social work interventions in relation to marginalised groups
- reflect and argue for appropriate ethical strands in social work related to globalization, poverty, human rights, and migration.

Course content

The course deals with the following topics:

- Interdisciplinary knowledge and perspectives to the existence and forms of globalization and global poverty.
- The various aspects and outcomes of global policies, interactions, exchanges, and power imbalances.

- Social determinants of health and development.
- The connections between migration, health and social work.
- Social Policy directions that aim to eradicate poverty at the local, national, and international levels.
- Critical reflections on globalization and contemporary solutions to global poverty.

Form of teaching

The course consists of sessions in the form of lectures, seminars, and a field study. In terms of activities, the students carry out independent learning, group work, oral presentations, and written submissions; all of which are to be conducted through a problem- and solution-oriented approach.

Language of instruction: English

Assessment

The intended learning outcomes are examined on the basis of five seminars and associated assignments. The seminars require compulsory attendance, active participation, and submission of assignments. In the event of absence, or insufficient participation at a seminar, a replacement assignment must be submitted by the student in agreement with the course coordinators throughout the academic year.

Seminar participation and associated assignments are graded with either Pass (G) or Fail (U), except for the final seminar. The assignment associated with the final seminar is assessed with the grade Pass with Distinction (VG), Pass (G) and Fail (U).

If the assignment receives the grade Fail (U), a replacement assignment must be submitted by the student. However, if the assignment receives the grade Fail (U), but is judged to be close to the limit for the grade Pass (G), supplementation must be allowed.

If the student has failed twice on the same examination element wishes to change examiner for the next examination session, such request should be submitted in writing to the department and must be approved unless there are special reasons on the contrary (HF Chapter 6, 22§).

If the student has received a recommendation from the University of Gothenburg for special pedagogical support, the examiner may, in case it is compatible with the intended course learning outcomes and provided that unreasonable resources are not required, decide to give the student an adapted examination or alternative form of examination.

In the event that a course has been discontinued or undergone major changes, the student must be guaranteed at least three examination sessions (including the regular examination session) for a period of at least one year, however, no longer than two years after the course has ended/changed. With regard to internships and work-based education, the corresponding applies, but with a limitation to only one additional examination session.

Grades

The grading scale comprises: Pass with Distinction (VG), Pass (G) and Fail (U). For the grade Pass (G), it is required that the intended course learning outcomes have been achieved and that the student has actively participated in all compulsory elements. For Pass with Distinction (VG) it is also required that the grade Pass with Distinction has been obtained for the final assignment.

Course evaluation

The course is evaluated in a separate evaluation protocol at the end of the course. Verbal evaluations could also be conducted with the main tutors. The evaluation results will be communicated to the students and function as a guide for developing the course further.
